If not logged in it links to authentication-page.

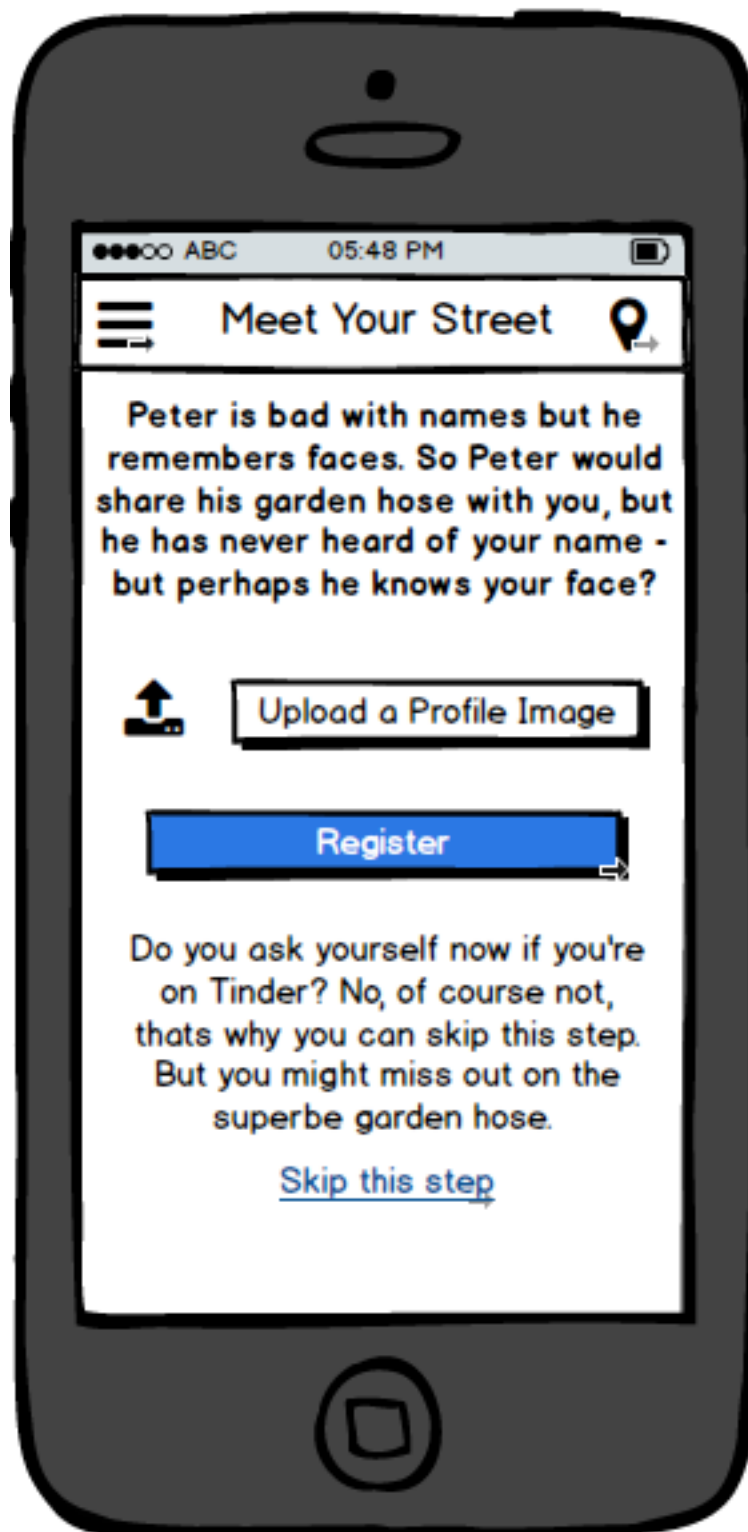

No Facebook-OAUTH because real-name and real-address policy is important. Facebook might give the impression that you can register with fake-accounts.

In order to have an easy onboarding-process it would be cool though to have a facebook-oauth for the first step (email and password) and then ask users for more informations. This would minimize the onboarding-effort for users.

Meet Your Street

Peter is bad with names but he remembers faces. So Peter would share his garden hose with you, but he has never heard of your name - but perhaps he knows your face?

Meet Your Street

Because you really want to water the garden with Peter's hose today, you want Peter to contact you via WhatsApp - asap.
